[DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.]

EASTERN DATES TO SEPT. 1.

Another Great Battle. McMahon Defeated. Twelve Guns and Thousands of Prisoners Captured.

BRUSSELS, August 31.—The King of Prussia sends the following to the Queen:

VARENNES, August 30.—The Crown Prince has been in action with the 12th and 17th corps and 14th Bavarian. McMahon was beaten and driven beyond the Meuse. Twelve guns and some thousands of prisoners taken.

LONDON, Aug. 31.—An engagement took place yesterday between strong force of Prussian cavalry and the advance guard of McMahon's army. After a hard contest the French fell back. To day the battle was renewed at Attigny.

A Herald's cable says a fearful battle was fought yesterday and to-day by the Prussian armies of the Crown Prince and Prince Frederick Charles and McMahon. They drove the French from their position. This morning the fighting was renewed and McMahon retreated to Sedan with the remnants of his forces. The slaughter was immense and it is impossible to estimate it.

Following dispatch has no date. It was filed at Brussels: The French defeated the Prussians here. Fighting going on at Attigny. McMahon seems to be retreating on the defenses of the north.

The railroad between Thionville and Mezieres is out in two places.

Destruction of the Strasbourg Library—Fearful Suffering of the Inhabitants.

The library at Strasbourg has been destroyed by bombardment.

It is reported that the sufferings of the people at Strasbourg are terrible.

The German Advance.

LONDON, August 31.—The Prussians conceiving that McMahon sought to gain the frontier, advanced on three lines. The Crown Prince south of Nancy, marched via Commercy, Bar le Duc, St. Dizier, and Vitry. The 4th army under Prince Royal of Saxony, keeping north of Pont au Mousson marched towards Chalons at the same time observing Metz, while Steinmetz was reinforced and proceeded through Verdun to Reims, his right sweeping the Belgian frontier in hope of meeting McMahon. This German advance covers country from along the Meuse to the Aube, rendering it impossible for McMahon to reach Metz.

The Emperor again Reported Ill.

LONDON, August 31.—It was reported this morning that the Emperor is seriously ill at Sedan. His condition excites great anxiety.

The Times says McMahon is endeavoring to retreat on Soissons, having failed in his attempt to relieve Bazaine at Metz.

Accounts from Berlin.

LONDON, August 31.—The Tribune's cable special correspondent telegraphs from Berlin this evening that the advance guard of the 12th corps yesterday successfully engaged the troops of the 5th corps of the French army at Novatil.

Trustworthy accounts put McMahon in a line from Mezieres to Sedan, which has brought his left wing on the railroad from Mezieres to Rethel. The extension of his left wing from Sedan to Songwy is not fully known.

New York Herald's Dispatches.

LONDON, August 31.—The Herald cable dispatch says: An engagement took place yesterday between a strong force of Prussian cavalry and the advance guard of McMahon's army. After a hard contest the French fell back. The Prussians took possession of Carignan on the railroad from Sedan to Thionville. To day the fighting is renewed at Attigny on the same line of the railroad, ten kilometres from the Belgian frontier. In consequence of the position of the contending forces, the Belgian troops are stationed at Philipsville and Bouillon.

BELGIUM, August 31—9 P. M.—The Herald's cable dispatch says: A fearful battle was fought yesterday and to day by the Prussian armies of the Crown Prince and Prince Frederick Charles, with the forces of Marshal McMahon. Yesterday morning McMahon commenced a general movement towards Montmedy. He was attacked near Beaumont and driven back after an obstinate resistance, towards the Belgian frontier. The Prussians occupied the line of road and captured a large amount of camp stores. They drove the French from their position after fighting until night.

This morning the battle was renewed, and continued all day. During the night a large number of French regiments came up, but they failed to turn the scale of victory.

The Prussians were also largely reinforced and attacked in overwhelming numbers. McMahon retreated to Sedan with the remnant of his forces. The slaughter was immense. It is impossible to estimate.

The Prince Imperial is said to be in Belgium.

The population is flying in great consternation.

Meetings held in Prussia to Discourage a Premature Treaty.

LONDON, August 31.—Public meetings are being held all over Prussia to sustain the Government in prosecuting the war to the end, and to discourage all attempts at a premature treaty.

Further Rumors.

LONDON, August 31.—A dispatch from Carignan says cannonading was heard south of that place all day yesterday and late into the night. The result is unknown.

The emperor has certainly left Carignan for Sedan.

LONDON, August 31—Midnight.—A special correspondent writes from Berlin, 29th, that three reserve armies are forming, which consist chiefly of Landwehrs, but partly of new troops.

One army is forming at Cologne, and a second at Berlin, and a third at Hamburg in the palatinate under the Duke of Mecklenburg.

The Times, striving to disentangle news from the seat of war, says McMahon seeks to get back again towards Paris. Saturday morning he was at Stenay. Sunday, according to French reports, he re-entered Vouziers and Rethel.

Belgian accounts report him on Tuesday at Sedan, with the Prince Imperial, and hourly expecting the Emperor. They had hastened forward on leaving the Emperor, where illness prevented him from travelling rapidly.

Some Germans say the French were so sure of victory at the opening of the campaign that they made no arrangements to save their baggage in case of retreat, and hence they have been compelled to abandon it in great quantities.

A VOTE OF THANKS TO THE GERMANS OF AMERICA.—The North German Consul General at San Francisco has received the following vote of thanks from Germany to the Germans of this country, for their sympathy with their native land, and the collections they are making for the European war:

Your warm sympathy and active help in the frivolous war with which an insolent enemy is invading us, has already truly benefitted us in our hearts. When you left your native homes, you transferred the penates of patriotism to your new country. There in the land of freedom, great by Washington's deeds, hallowed by the martyr blood of the noble, inflexible Lincoln, you have not lost the feeling of communion with us, your German brethren on this side of the ocean. In glaring flames of enthusiasm for your native land, you rise against the same Caesarism which stretched forth its hand for Mexico, which protected the hydra of rebellion in your country, as much as it could do so, and which now intends to enrich the peaceful banks of the river Rhine with blood. Thanks to you for this love, this enthusiasm, dear compatriots. Across the ocean we reach to you, in German faithfulness, the brotherly hand. Three cheers for the common mother! Three cheers for Germania! Three cheers for the daughter, bright with freedom! Three cheers for America! Thus resolved at Cologne, on the Rhine, the 26th of July, 1870, with unanimous, enthusiastic applause, by a mass meeting, held at the Gertrudenhof. [illegible], President.
HAUCK, Secretary.

For each of the ten provinces of India a geographical and statistical gazetteer is in course of preparation, and these ten volumes combined will furnish material for a great alphabetical compendium of miscellaneous information about India, after the census of 1871. This system should be applicable to Great Britain and other countries as well as India.

LAST NIGHT'S DISPATCHES.

[SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.]

The New York World's Dispatches.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—The World's London correspondent telegraphs that "we hear of serious outbreaks in various parts of Southern France and Brittany against persons suspected of German sympathy.

The peasantry of Champagne, Lorraine and Alsace are rushing upon the lines of Prussian communications.

Capt. Von Polonski was captured by a body of sharp shooters near Vitry and has not been heard of since.

It is said that Colonel Dupin, famous as a commander of guerrillas in Mexico, is organizing a corps in Lorraine.

Four Days Battle.

CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—A New York private dispatch from Brussels says fighting has been going on for four days between McMahon and Prince Charles. Both armies are working for a position, and the conflicts have been between detached corps. The fighting is said to have been desperate. The Prussians have captured three eagles and mitrailleurs and several thousand prisoners, while the French have captured thirteen pieces of artillery, including the famous Tubinger battery.

There was a fresh engagement again this morning six miles from the Belgian frontier, between the command of Froissard and the Prussians under Von Weid. It is believed here, [Brussels] that this will involve both armies in a decisive battle.

A dispatch from London, midnight, says McMahon is utterly routed after a two day's battle, and is falling back on Paris.

News by Way of London.

LONDON, Sept. 1.—The Independence Belge, (Brussels) of yesterday says: McMahon, while on the heights of Beaumont, on Tuesday, advancing to Montmedy was attacked by the Germans and flung back with dreadful carnage. This region of the country is now absolutely depopulated. This corresponds with the Prussian account of the action near Beaumont as reported late last evening.

Noon—No additional details of the defeat of McMahon yet received.

Bazaine not Caged.

LONDON, Sept. 1.—A Vienna telegram denies that Bazaine was ever caged at Metz.

Another battle is reported at Attigny. No particulars.

BERLIN, Sept. 1.—Telegraph lines are still in inextricable confusion. Dates and messages from the seat of war, particularly those from Beaumont require verification.

McMahon's Movements.

LONDON, Sept. 1., 3 P. M.—There is an unverified rumor of McMahon crossing the Meuse at Stenay and pushing for Montmedy. He has six hundred guns. A collision between him and Prince Frederick Charles is expected.

News from Paris.

PARIS, Sept. 1.—The Public says no fighting took place yesterday. Government, however, has good news. McMahon's march has been undisturbed. Bazaine has won several small engagements. He forbids correspondents to affix names of the place where they were.

The Ministers go to Tours immediately.

It is said that 200,000 Prussians have been killed or wounded since war began, and that half a million francs are daily expended.

General Details.

LONDON, Sept. 1.—It is said that McMahon disobeyed the Emperor's orders to detach 30,000 troops to protect the Prince Imperial.

The siege of Strasbourg continues with great slaughter from the bombardment. The garrison made a successful sortie on Tuesday night, driving the Prussians several times.

A large body of Mobiles passed Pluver, near Battinger, cut the telegraph and retired. It is reported that an army corps entered France from Baden.

ARLON, Belgium, Sept. 1.—Serious fighting is reported between Carignan and Dozo. The Prussians entered Carrignay at 1 o'clock yesterday.

CURRENT NOTES.

The privilege of advertising in the street cars of Sacramento has been sold to a San Franciscan, who pays the company $1,200 per year.

Population follows the locomotive and the post-office follows population. In Kansas, where some 800 miles of railroad have been built recently, 212 post offices have been established during the last four months, and petitions are received daily for a further increase.

On the 25th of August sixty heirs of Sir Francis Drake met in New York to take measures for the recovery of an estate of $125,500,000 in England. The principal business was to provide for the payment of expenses already incurred. This is quite a snug little estate and is worth going after.

At a meeting of ladies, recently held in Wyoming Territory, to discuss the political situation, a resolution was adopted of which the following is a synopsis: "The ladies would avail themselves of the political privileges and powers bestowed upon them to support for Delegate to Congress the candidate who was possessed of a good moral character, and was favorable to woman's franchise, irrespective of his political proclivities.

It appears from the letter of Messrs. Dent & Paige, attorneys of Washington City, that the chief obstacle to the negotiation of $50,000,000 of Cuban bonds was the refusal of the Cuban Junta of New York to pay brokerage to Messrs. Soutter & Co. and Henry Clews & Co., who offered to negotiate the funds. To this one error of the Junta the Cubans owe it that they still struggle without arms and ammunition against the Spanish power.

Napoleon's Nemesis.

[From the New York Sun.]

A distinguished Catholic ecclesiastic, member of a religious order in this city, clearly sees the hand of a divine Nemesis in the misfortunes which are obscuring the star of Napoleon. Speaking of the recent French defeat, "That is just what Louis Napoleon deserved," said he; "he could not expect better for forsaking the Pope. The miserable wretch, to withdraw his paltry three thousand men from Rome! It is a divine retribution. When I first heard of the proposition to withdraw the troops from Rome, I said the curse of God would follow Napoleon for it, and it has followed him. Why, he has already lost more than the handful of three thousand men he had in Rome. He pretends to be a Catholic. He has no more religion than a jackass.

"Of course now the Holy Father will have to look out for himself. He could not stay in Rome in the midst of the revolutionists, who will pour into Rome and excite insurrection when they find the Pope defenseless. As for Victor Emanuel's promises to take the place of the French and protect the Holy Father, they are not to be relied on. Victor Emanuel's promises are worth nothing. Even should that silly, vacillating man bind himself by treaty to do it, there could be no assurance to the Pope, for Victor Emanuel is as little bound by treaties as by promises.

"Besides Victor Emanuel would be borne away by the tide of irreligious and unholy sentiment which flows so strongly in the dominions over which he has so unrighteously acquired control. There is little or no doubt that Garibaldi and the rest of his stamp will soon be in Rome, and the Pope will have to leave. I should not be surprised at his requesting the use of a vessel from the French Empress to bear him away, as stated. Where he will go, it is, of course, impossible to tell. But he will return to Rome some time.

"It is not the first time the Pope has been driven from Rome. But what would Rome be without the Pope? She would sink into a city of shopkeepers, become like any other commercial city, and soon lose all interest. Those who would rule her, too, would be no respecters of things sacred or profane. The repositories of glorious ancient art would be spoiled, and Rome would be once more at the mercy of the Vandals. The inevitable fate of Rome, in the course of time, would be that it would become a desert. Yes, Rome would be nothing without the Pope."

POLITICAL NOTES.

The Portland Argus (Democrat) gives its cordial support to any movement which has for its object the election of Governor Chamberlin to the United States Senate, and all the more from the fact that there is no chance of electing an outright Democrat.

The New York Tribune says that the census of that city is going to show up the false voting done by Tammany, and the guilty parties are naturally alarmed, not so much at the exposure as at the certainty that the result will be to break up their nefarious practices.

The dispute over the Republican nomination in the Second (Philadelphia) Congressional District of Pennsylvania has been settled by the unanimous recognition of Hon. Charles O'Neill, by the City Executive Committee, as the candidate of the Republican party. Mr. O'Neill will be returned to Congress by more than his usual hand some majority.

Under the head of "Foreigners Ostracising Foreigners," the Sacramento Union has this: The Anti Chinese Convention now operating from day to day in San Francisco with the view among about half the members of it to make the movement auxiliary to the Democratic party, and among the rest to secure independent nominations, is not a harmonious body. On Tuesday night they broke up and adjourned in a row, after being insulted by and quarrelling with their Secretary. The whole object of these men seems to be the persecution of one class of foreign immigrants, and the abrogation or unlawful violation of a solemn treaty entered into by the United States. What makes this persecution look as bad as possible, is the fact that the leaders and probably a majority of the associations composing the new organization, are themselves of foreign birth, who owe their rights and political privileges in this country to just such liberal and enlightened laws as they now seek to have repealed or trampled in the dust when other foreigners as frugal, peaceable, industrious as themselves want to secure their benefits.

WAR MISCELLANY.

Louis Napoleon, in reply to the urgent request of his Generals that he should return to Paris, said: "I will not return until dead or victorious." If he adheres to this resolution, the Imperial sexton will soon have a heavy job upon his hands.

In the Cologne Gazette of July 27th the following advertisement appeared: "Reward of fifty thalers—To the German who first takes a Turco, in order to show him in the Zoological Gardens of this city. An additional forty thalers will be given if said Turco be taken with a well known cat, which, we understand, each keeps on his knapsack.

Edmund About it seems is missing after all, and it is feared was killed in some of the first engagements between the French and Prussian armies. Should it turn out that he is alive, it may be safely inferred that he will not be appointed Minister to Washington, as rumor said he would be a short time since. His late sharp criticism of the "masterly inactivity" of the Emperor at the beginning of the war was sufficient evidence that he looked for no favors at the hands of Napoleon.

Commenting on French management in the present war, an observing writer says: It seems that the French Military Bureau was so badly managed that the Commissary Department was almost without provisions! The writers from McMahon's army say the troops were living on vegetables and unripe fruit. No doubt they are remedying these great faults, and getting ready for a long and hard war. But all this shows clearly that the French army is without an able General, and the French people without an able Government. When the French talk of being overwhelmed by numbers, recollect that France is but little less populous than all Germany. France has thirty-six millions of people, and for a time can keep two millions of men in the field. The truth is, the Germans are more patriotic and willing to fight than the French are.

CALIFORNIA AND NEVADA.

The Stockton Independent says that the business men of that city are "losing ground," that "the majority of them have continued to practice the Micawber policy until they have found that, notwithstanding their professed wisdom, Stockton is fast losing trade that she has heretofore controlled.

Larry Murray having indignantly denounced an apparent inclination in the San Francisco Democratic County Convention, towards "alamaguzzling" is called upon to define the meaning of the word, and in response give the following lucid translation: Now the alamaguzzler is the worst character with whom we have to deal. He holds himself all aloof, and from his elevated position, with keen and piercing glance, looks down upon the actions of the contending parties while they are slugging around, led on by the fierce conubiator on the one side and the untiring whangdoodle on the other, until the prize is once fairly turned up, when he, this terrible alamaguzzler comes down with one fell swoop and finally seizes the prey and carries it off in triumph.

We cut the subjoined item from the Virginia Enterprise of the 18th: Yesterday afternoon a Piute Indian and a Chinaman had a singular contest on Taylor street, between B and C streets. Both were evidently highly enraged, but, instead of striking with their fists, they seized hold of each other by the shoulders and began pushing like two Spanish steers. Up and down the street they had it for nearly half an hour, much to the amusement of a large crowd of spectators. Sometimes one appeared to have the best of it, and again his antagonist outpushed. Both constantly scolded in their respective languages, and the eyes of both flashed a deadly hate, yet neither cared to do more than outpush the other. At length the pair of wild bulls were forced to quit the contest from mere exhaustion neither having gained the victory.

FRIDAY MORNING, SEPTEMBER 2, 1870.

Paradol's Prophecy of the Downfall of France.

We hope our readers have considered the chapter from M. Paradol's notable work, "La France Nouvelle," a translation of which we printed a day or two since. Paradol, it will be remembered, was the French Minister at Washington, who took his own life a few weeks ago. In the light of great events that are now transpiring, the passages of Paradol's work to which we allude seem more like a record of things past than the predictions of a philosopher and statesman of events to come, and all the circumstances attending his death point to the fact that he was driven to the act by the depressing and deepening conviction that the glory of his country was about to be obscured, and that her fatal day was near at hand.

It is worth while to dwell still farther upon some of the considerations presented in this remarkable view of the future of France. Paradol held that the war was inevitable; every forecasting mind both in France and Germany had long anticipated it. He was satisfied that France could gain nothing of a substantial nature by the war, even in the event of a great military triumph. He felt most clearly and intensely that Prussia was growing much more rapidly than France, and pointed out the fact that between 1817 and 1864 the increase of population in the former country was eighty-two per cent., while in the latter it was only twenty-five. The same disproportion he observed, was marked in regard to other parts of Germany, in spite of the heavy emigration to the United States, to which France is not subject. And Germany—while growing stronger at home—was enlarging and spreading her power in the world by her colonies of emigrants to all quarters of the globe. With the other off-shoots of the great Germanic race, Paradol sadly observed, they have their foothold on every island and continent, while France has no hopeful colonies and no active pioneers of her commerce and civilization. The French people, said he, are "singularly unenterprising as colonists, and the glory gained under Louis XIV., under the Directory, under Napoleon, under Louis Philippe even, is fast receding in the distance till it has become scarcely more than a memory and a name."

Under these circumstances he feared the results of the inevitable contest with Germany. The defeat of France, he felt, would be equivalent to the annihilation of her power and prestige on the continent. He argued that the very fact of war would have concentrated a nation of fifty millions on the very border of France, who, not satisfied with the recovery of Alsace and Lorraine—essentially German as to population—would proceed to dictate the terms of peace, and embrace in their demands a limitation of the political, maritime, and commercial influence of France, which would reduce her to a secondary place on the theatre of the world.

It must be admitted that the tendency of events seems likely very soon to verify these anticipations. France, indeed, if the worst predictions should be realized in regard to her fate, would still have a place on the map of Europe; but as Paradol observed, she would be "without strength or honor." That he felt keenly the anticipated humiliation of his country is obvious from the following inquiry: "How could life be a prize to us if we were obliged henceforward to carry it on a half demolished debris, covered yet by the pavilion of old France, but which could not float any more except at the will of all European caprices?" How ominous of his own fate do these words now appear!

Progress of the War.

The fortunes of war are still against the French. To what extent the French forces may have been demoralized in recent battles it is impossible to conjecture. If, however, they are still in a condition to fight, we may be sure the war will go on. But if matters are now about approaching a crisis for France and she is about to be overpowered and stripped of territory to still further augment the power of Germany, it is almost certain that other nations will interpose. The balance of power in Europe is no chimera. All Europe will look with envy, distrust, and alarm upon the growth of any one military power to the enormous proportions which that of Germany has suddenly assumed. Great Britain has interests which may be seriously compromised, and though she is unwilling to fight she will fight when national and commercial considerations are involved. Russia has always been a doubtful friend of Germany, and there have been indications of late that she may appear as an actor in the scene. The several powers, while they may not regret to see France worsted in the struggle, would hardly permit her dismemberment. Balance of power is no empty phrase, and will be maintained hereafter, as it has been for centuries heretofore.

The Census.

Below we present a comparison of the population returned by the present census, so far as the same has been received, with the population returned in the same counties ten years ago:

	1870.	1860.
Marion	9,964	7,088
Clatsop	1,255	498
Columbia	863	532
Tillamook	408	95
Washington	4,220	2,801
Clackamas	5,912	3,466
Multnomah	11,5[illegible]	4,150
Benton	4,551	3,074
Baker	2,60[illegible]	New Counties.
Union	2,555
Umatilla	2,9[illegible]
	45,9[illegible]	21,[illegible]

The counties not embraced in the above enumeration contained in 1860, 30,781 inhabitants,—about three-fifths of the population of the State. But their rate of increase has not been so rapid as that of the counties named above; hence the present population of the State cannot be above 90,000. In 1860 it was 52,465.

A Fact for Free Traders.

A British iron-exporting house has recently printed a circular which sets forth that the hope of securing higher prices for British iron in 1870 than had prevailed in 1869 was based on reduction of the American tariff. Here is a valuable text for the consideration of free traders. British iron masters had hoped that our tariff would be greatly reduced, so that we could no longer make iron with profit. Then when they should get undisputed command of the market, they would put the price up on us again, and we would be in no condition to resist their demands. Such has always been the policy of British manufacturers. From the above fact it will be seen that the overthrow of the American protective policy would not cheapen manufactured articles. It would simply be giving the profit of their manufacture to foreign countries and depriving home labor of employment.

WAR NOTES BY TELEGRAPH.

A quarter of a million facsimiles of Benedetti's secret treaty have been sold in London since the war began.

At Starrie Rux-Chenos Marshal Canrobert threw himself before his troops, and after a sharp sword combat with a Prussian officer, drove the enemy back.

In a recent battle Michael Ney, Duke of Elchingen, grandson of the "bravest of the brave," received three cuts across the face with a sabre, and was promoted on the field.

Prince Felix Salm-Salm, a Major in the Prussian Guard, distinguished for services in the Mexican and American wars, was killed in the battle of August 18th, at Gravelotte.

Following is a Paris dispatch of August 25: The Journal Officiel says our ports are free. Our fleet will strike the enemy in the North and Baltic seas. There can be no comparison of our ships with those of the enemy. Prussia understands by this time that the longer the struggle is prolonged the better will be our situation. Our resources, men and means are inexhaustible.

A World's correspondent telegraphs from London as follows: "I have now the key of the recent Wurtemburg mission to England. The Court and people of Wurtemburg are both dissatisfied with the course of the Prussian Government. The contingent of Wurtemburg in the Crown Princes' army massed with that of Baden is not put under the command of any Wurtemburg officer, but of the Prussian General Von Worden, second in command to the Crown Prince. This gives great offence in the field and at Stuttgart. The King of Prussia has also announced his intention of bestowing Alsace and Lorraine upon his son-in-law, the Grand Duke of Baden, whose dominions are contiguous to Wurtemburg. Against all this, Wurtemburg chafes, and is preparing to resist the projects of the Prussian Government.

Poor Turkey decides upon "armed neutrality," however much the English premier dislikes that phrase. With a strong army corps on the Danube, and another in Bosnia, the Sultan's government hopes to be able to meet events with comparative calm. The Porte has, apparently, an available military force of 300,000 men, and these can be at once armed with breech loaders. Nay, we read also in the Constantinople journals of a supply of mitrailleuses by an American manufacturer. The Sultan considers himself, also, entitled to a contingent of 300,000 men from the Khedive—a force now under American officers. The navy is being put in an effective state, and an ironclad squadron is cruising about, just as though Turkish finance was the envy of the world.

A War of Races and Religion.

A distinguished officer of our army, who has studied the French in their own country, writes as follows about the war and its significance:

I think this war is working out a deeper aesthetic problem than is generally supposed. It is really one of the old Latin race against the Saxon, one of illiberality and ignorance, against progress and learning, and I believe the victory was wrought out in the school houses of North Germany in years agone. Races, like individuals, are born, mature and die.

Science and art and learning, and all with ambition and power, have done their utmost, and what is there left? The passions of life are exhausted, and the means for the gratification of every wish and every fancy made easy. The virtue of woman has ceased to have a valuation, and sensuous living is no longer a scandal; while the utter abandonment one sees not only at the Mabille balls, but on the streets and everywhere, seems to say this is certainly a second Sodom, and there is a great and terrible doom awaiting it. This idea has forced itself upon me a hundred times when witnessing the various scenes incident to Parisian life, and never more powerfully than when witnessing a whole army executing the jugglery of high mass at Chalons-upon-Marne, now headquarters of the French army.

Who can tell how far the present contest will go towards bringing this doom about? That it will reach towards it there can scarcely be a doubt. There is a natural law of change that spares nothing, neither Kings nor nations, and strangely, the objects are themselves made the mediums of its execution.

The Latins are in their old age, and demented, while the Saxons are yet in their early manhood, and one finds them everywhere working out the problem of progressing humanity in their own vigorous way with hand and intellect. Not so the other. We find besotted ignorance and unreasoning fanaticism resting upon all their lands and countries, except an occasional off-shoot of learning and science like vigorous branches from a decaying trunk, while they neither emigrate nor colonize, but remain torpidly about the scenes of a life spent. While Paris is so full of beauty, a close observer is constantly impressed that life there is nearly exhausted and almost run through.

The Prussian Programme—A Prophetic Toast by the Crown Prince.—The Opinion Nationale tells the following anecdote as appropriate to the time. Whether authentic or not, its prophecy is in a fair way to be realized:

"It was about the end of April, 1867, at the time when the Luxemburg affair had assumed a decidedly warlike aspect. A half dozen persons of high rank, chiefly Generals, were dining at Berlin, at a Prince's table. In drinking the champagne, war was spoken of; it was considered as inevitable. 'Well, gentlemen,' said the Prince, rising, 'Let us drink to Prussia with this good French wine. We want six weeks to mobilize our army and mass is on the Saar; one month to pass over French bodies, enter Paris, there dictate peace and raise the contribution of war! The plan is capital! We shall have returned by the opening of the hunting season!'"

The Interviews at Ems.

[Stuttgardt Correspondence (July 27) of the New York Tribune.]

The exact nature of the interviews at Ems between the King of Prussia and the French Embassador, Benedetti, has just appeared in official documents. I make a simple record of the facts. The first audience took place on July 9th, at the request of Count Benedetti. It was demanded by him that the King should require the Prince of Hohenzollern to withdraw his acceptance of the Spanish Crown. The King replied that, as in the whole affair, he had been addressed as the head of the family only, and never as the King of Prussia, and had accordingly given no command for the acceptance of the candidature, he could also give no command for withdrawal. On the 11th of July Count Benedetti requested a second interview, which was granted. In this interview he was urgent with the King to prevail upon Prince Leopold to renounce the crown. The King replied that the Prince was perfectly free to decide for himself, and that, moreover, he did not even know where he was at that moment, as he was about to take a journey to the Alps. On the morning of July 13, the King met Benedetti on the public promenade before the fountain, and gave him an extra copy of The Cologne Gazette, which he had just received, with a private telegram from Sigmaringen, relating the withdrawal of the Prince, remarking at the same time that he himself had heard nothing from Sigmaringen, but should expect letters that day. Count Benedetti replied that he had already received the same information on the evening previous from Paris, and, as the King regarded the matter as thus settled, the Count wholly unexpectedly made a new demand, proposing to the King that he should expressly pledge himself never to give his consent in case the question of the candidature should at any subsequent time be revived. The King decidedly refused to comply with any such demand, and when Benedetti returned to his proposal with increasing importunity, stood by his answer. In spite of this, a few hours after, the Count requested a third audience. Upon being asked what subject was to be considered, he gave for answer that he wished to renew the discussion of the morning. The King declined another audience, as he had no answer but that already given, and, moreover, all negotiations must now take place through the Ministry. Benedetti requested permission to take leave of the King, upon his departure from Ems, which was so far granted that the King bowed to him as the latter was leaving the railway station the next day for Coblenz. Each of the interviews of Benedetti with the King had the character of a private conversation. The Count did not once pretend to be acting in his official capacity.

In the preceding statement, which is sanctioned by the King himself, no mention is made of the rudeness of Benedetti in forcing himself upon His Majesty while indulging in the recreation of a walk on the crowded promenade of Ems. It is generally regarded, however, as a studied insult on the part of the French Minister, and is commented on with indignation by the German press. Such a violation of diplomatic courtesy could hardly have been accidental. Not even the excitement of a sudden surprise could excuse the incivility, but there was no surprise in the case; the Count had received the news the night before, and had at least 12 hours to meditate his course of action. The affair was witnessed with astonishment by the numerous spectators of the scene, who drew their own augury of its probable consequences. It was interpreted as a sign of hostility toward Prussia, and two days after came the declaration of war.

An Extended Popularity.—Brown's Bronchial Troches have been before the public many years. Each year finds them in new localities in various parts of the world. The Troches are pronounced universally superior to all other articles used for similar purposes. For relieving Coughs, Colds and Throat Diseases, the Troches have been proved reliable.

Napoleon as a Strategist.—One of the high military strategists of this city holds that Napoleon is permitting the Germans to gain certain advantages on the frontier in order that he may draw the Prussian army into the heart of France, where he will fall upon it and destroy it. It was for this purpose he permitted them to pass into France and win their first fight. For this it was that he allowed them to defeat McMahon and drive him from Worth in confusion; and for this he permitted them to pass the line of Vosges. For this it was he allowed them to become victorious at Metz. For this he has permitted them to seize a large number of important cities and strongholds in the north-western part of France. For this he has allowed them to take prisoners many thousands of his men, and capture hundreds of his cannon. All this would be excellent reasoning if [illegible] had a pair of legs to walk with, or a little brains to save it from idiocy.—N. Y. [illegible]

W. and Margaret F. Chapman [illegible], on the west by the western boundary of said donation claim, and on the south [illegible] the Thomas Carter donation claim and an extension of [illegible], containing ten acres, [illegible] together with the buildings and improvements thereon.
Therefore by virtue of said execution and said execution and order of sale, I will sell on the first day of October, 1870, at the hour of 10 o'clock A. CITY.

The Vagrant Ordinance Needed Most.—[illegible] the City Council [illegible] the vagrant [illegible] exactly what is [illegible] but there is nothing [illegible] and complete [illegible] vagrant law [illegible] of the great [illegible]. We have [illegible] a large and rapidly increasing class of [illegible] who prefer to obtain the means of [illegible] existence by [illegible] They are sneak thieves rather than to work. They are sneak thieves, house breakers, garroters, robbers, confidence men, gamblers, [illegible] and never have a dollar except [illegible] obtained by disreputable or criminal means. [illegible] in whatever light we may view them, they are pests in the community, a terror to peaceable citizens, and a disgrace to the [illegible]. Just now, in consequence of vigorous measures against them by the police and [illegible] of San Francisco, they are flocking to this city in such numbers as to furnish reasonable grounds for serious apprehensions in regard to the safety of persons and property. There never has been a time when our streets were so insecure for pedestrians at night, or for property not protected by locks and bars. Our city's reputation is rapidly going to the bad. The old ordinance defining and providing for the punishment of disorderly conduct fails utterly to meet the requirements of the case, partly through its own weakness and partly through the interpretation given it by the Recorder. Something new, clear, [illegible] and unmistakable is needed in the [illegible] legal provisions. Unfortunately, however, at such a juncture, our City Council seems to be practicing the art of "How not to do it." Last week the ordinance to provide for an efficient day and night police, after having hung fire for several weeks was defeated on the ground of the expense it would entail. No objection of this kind was made till the very moment of voting upon the ordinance. The ordinances relating to vagrancy, of which we have been speaking, have been hanging fire for some time, and now they are referred to a judiciary committee. Meantime the city is full of thieves, rogues of all degrees and vagrants who find the limited police force very little in their way, not so much because arrests are not or cannot be made, as because there is no law under which to punish parties when arrested. When will the City Fathers get into a business mood and do something to relieve the people from the incubus of thieves rule.

Some False Stories Corrected.—An item was published in the Bulletin yesterday concerning the cutting of a Chinaman by Mr. W. H. Brackett, and several stories were afloat on the street about the occurrence, neither of which were true. Mr. Brackett is a quiet, industrious and truthful citizen whose statement about the matter may be taken unhesitatingly. He says he did not use any knife, nor did he have one about him, and Mrs Brackett confirms this statement. The facts are that the Chinaman had greatly exasperated Mr. B. by the usage of the children and by being not only obstinate and disobedient, but exceedingly impudent. On the morning in question, the Chinaman was mad about being called earlier than usual to get breakfast, and refused to work. Mrs. Brackett had to get up finally and get breakfast. The Chinaman, as usual of late, was very saucy to her. When the family sat down to breakfast, the Chinaman was set to baking griddle cakes. He brought in two or three plates of cakes burned to a crisp—totally unfit to eat. The last time he did this, Mr. Brackett rose from the table took the plate in his right hand, and following the Chinaman into the kitchen, attempted merely to dash the cakes into the Chinaman's face, intending then to turn him out of the house. As he made the dash with the plate, the Chinaman tried to duck down his head. By this means the plate, instead of the cakes, hit the Chinaman on the nose. The blow broke the plate, a fragile China dish, and the broken edge did the cutting which the Chinaman swore, falsely, was done with a knife. This is all there is of the story.

East Portland Items.—The locomotive and tender were landed from the Live Yankee yesterday in good order.

The piles to be driven for a wharf at Clinton's Point are being prepared. They are to have iron points on account of the hard gravel into which they are to be driven.

Building materials—lumber, brick and lime—are being sent over from this side in large quantities. Not long since East Portland was furnishing this side with brick and lumber. Corbett's building was built of East Portland brick. There is some compensation in all this.

The new ferry landing is in a wretched condition. The proprietors should take measures to have it repaired. It is a very common occurrence that loaded teams get mired down in the quicksand near the water.

Castello's Circus Band, with six spans of horses attached to their car, were tooting to the East Portlanders yesterday afternoon.

The Railroad.—The driving of piles on which to construct the track across Lake Labishe, was completed last Tuesday. No difficulty was encountered except that the piles had to be driven to a great depth. Our informant says that thirty five feet piles were driven down till a man could sit on top of them from the ground. They were driven without being sharpened, and till the immense hammer failed to budge them any further. The foundation, therefore, is as permanent as any piling could be made. It had been feared that a good foundation could not be obtained. Mr. I. R. Moores informs us that the track is now completed to a point only four or five miles this side of Waconda, and that the cars will connect with the stage at that place next Monday. It will be finished to the Fair Ground in about ten days and to Salem in twelve days.

Passengers for California.—The steamship Ajax, [illegible], commander, sailed for San Francisco, at 5 o'clock P. M. yesterday. The following is a list of her passengers: J S Vanduzer, J Emmons, Rev H C Benson, Rev J D Driver, Geo Crook and wife, Capt Josiah Myrick, R G Smith, Geo [illegible]stone, J Copeland, Alexander C Anderson, M H Martin, A Summer, L Honigsberg, Thos [illegible], Charles A Taylor, George F Wilson, Wm J McConnell, C S Silver, Thomas Chancon, Mrs C Douglass, Mrs Northrop, Miss Jennie Smith, C M Lockwood, M Hillman, Mrs Duffy, Miss [illegible], Dr D Clark, P M Shroutar, wife and two children, Mrs Harris and sister, [illegible], J McHazelton, John H Parker, H [illegible], [illegible] Thompson, Joseph Freeman, and seven in the steerage.

Good Templars Convention.—There will be a District Convention of Good Templars of the District of Multnomah, at East Portland, on Monday, September 12th, at 10 o'clock A. M. The District Deputy, Mr. C. G. Devine, has issued a circular calling upon the several lodges of the county to furnish each an essay upon the following subjects: Music, how obtained, and its advantages; the Lodge room, its fixtures, arrangement and adornment; The Financial Secretary, his duties and what he can best do for the interest of his Lodge; The Lodge Deputy, his duties; Temperance Press, its management and benefits; Revivals, how maintained and its advantages; Order and discipline; Secrecy. District [illegible]

The Willamette University.—This institution of learning will open its fall term on Monday, the 5th inst., under the Presidency of Prof. T. M. Gatch. Mr. Gatch, with his family, leaves this morning for Salem to prepare for re-entering his old position in the University. Formerly when the school was under his charge it attained to a prosperity never since exceeded, if we take the accounts [illegible] of our school going population. We predict for the University for the coming year a period of prosperity beyond that of any former year in its history.

Railroad Items.—The [illegible] Railroad, on and after Monday next, will run two trains a day each way between East Portland and Waconda, connecting at the latter place with the Oregon and California stages. Trains will start from East Portland at 7 A. M. and 1 P. M., arriving at Waconda at 10 A. M. and 3 P. M. They will leave Waconda at 10:30 A. M. and 4 P. M., arriving at East Portland at 1:30 and 7 P. M. Waconda is twenty [illegible] miles [illegible] about one [illegible] travel. The time between Portland and Salem will be from three to four hours.

The Live Yankee.—This vessel discharged her locomotive and other railroad material at East Portland, yesterday, and hauled over to Abernethy's wharf on this side to discharge her cargo of merchandise.

Buggies, Carriages, etc.—E. Martin & Co. received by the bark Whistler a fine lot of eastern made buggies, carriages, spring wagons, etc. They are offering advantageous bargains.

CITY.

THE VAGRANT ORDINANCES—NEEDED MEASURES.—There are two ordinances pending before the City Council, providing definitions of, and punishments for, vagrancy. We are not prepared to say that either of them is exactly what is needed, but there is nothing clearer than that a good, effective and comprehensive vagrant law is one of the greatest present needs of the city so far as police regulations are concerned. We have [illegible] a large and rapidly increasing class of [illegible] persons who prefer to obtain the means of [illegible] by dishonest and criminal practices rather than to work. They are sneak thieves, house breakers, garroters, robbers, confidence [illegible], bummers of all varieties, etc., etc. They never produce a dollar and never have a dollar except it be obtained by disreputable or [illegible] means. Consider them in whatever light we may, they are pests in the community, a terror to peaceable citizens, and a disgrace to the human species. Just now, in consequence of vigorous measures against them by the police and courts of San Francisco, they are flocking to this city in such numbers as to furnish reasonable grounds for serious apprehensions in regard to the safety of persons and property. There never was a time when our streets were so insecure to pedestrians at night, or for property not protected by locks and bars. Our city's reputation is rapidly going to the bad. The old ordinance defining and providing for the punishment of disorderly conduct fails utterly to meet the requirements of the case, partly through its own weakness and partly through the interpretation given it by the Recorder. Something new, clear, strong and unmistakable is needed in the way of legal provisions. Unfortunately, however, at such a juncture, our City Council seems to be practicing the art of "How not to do it." Last [illegible] the ordinance to provide for an efficient day and night police, after having hung fire for several [illegible] defeated, on the ground of the expense it would entail. No objection of this [illegible] was made till the very moment of voting upon the ordinance. The ordinances relating to [illegible] of which we have been speaking, have been hanging fire for some time, and now they are referred to a judiciary committee. Meanwhile the city is full of thieves, rogues of all degrees and vagrants who find the limited police [illegible] very little in their way, not so much because arrests are not or cannot be made, as because there is no law under which to punish parties so arrested. When will the City Fathers [illegible] mood and do something to relieve the people from the incubus of thieves rule.

FALSE STORIES CORRECTED.—An item [illegible] in the Bulletin yesterday concerning the [illegible] of a Chinaman by Mr. W. H. Brackett [illegible] several stories were afloat on the street [illegible], neither of which were true. [illegible] is a quiet, industrious and truthful [illegible] statement about the matter may be [illegible]. He says he did not use [illegible] did he have one about him, and [illegible] confirms this statement. The facts [illegible] the Chinaman had greatly exasperated [illegible] by the usage of the children and by being [illegible] and disobedient, but excessive [illegible]. On the morning in question, the [illegible] mad about being called earlier [illegible] breakfast, and refused to work. [illegible] to get up finally and get breakfast [illegible], as usual of late, was very [illegible]. When the family sat down to [illegible] the Chinaman was set to baking griddle [illegible] brought in two or three plates of [illegible] to a crisp—totally unfit to eat. The [illegible] this, Mr. Brackett rose from the [illegible] plate in his right hand, and followed [illegible] into the kitchen, attempted [illegible] the cakes into the Chinaman's [illegible] him to turn him out of the house. [illegible] the dash with the plate, the Chinaman [illegible] down his head. By this means [illegible] of the cakes, hit the Chinaman [illegible]. The blow broke the plate, a fragile [illegible], and the broken edge did the cutting [illegible] Chinaman swore, falsely, was done [illegible]. This is all there is of the story.

[illegible] ITEMS.—The locomotive and [illegible] landed from the Live Yankee yesterday [illegible].

[illegible] to be driven for a wharf at Clinton's [illegible]. They are to have iron [illegible] of the hard gravel into which [illegible].

[illegible] materials—lumber, brick and lime—[illegible] from this side in large quantities. [illegible] since East Portland was furnished [illegible] with brick and lumber. Corbett's [illegible] built of East Portland brick. There [illegible] all this.

[illegible] ferry landing is in a wretched condition. The proprietors should take measures to [illegible]. It is a very common occur[illegible] down in the [illegible].

[illegible] Band, with six spans of [illegible], were touting to the [illegible] afternoon.

[illegible] The driving of piles on [illegible] the track across Lake La[illegible] was completed last Tuesday. No difficulty [illegible] except that the piles had to be [illegible] to a great depth. Our informant says that [illegible] feet piles were driven down till a man [illegible] on top of them from the ground. They [illegible] without being sharpened, and till the [illegible] failed to budge them any further. The foundation, therefore, is as permanent [illegible] could be made. It had been feared [illegible] foundation could not be obtained. [illegible] Moores informs us that the track is [illegible] to a point only four or five miles [illegible] Waconda, and that the cars will connect [illegible] stage at that place next Monday. [illegible] finished to the Fair Ground in about [illegible] to Salem in twelve days.

[illegible] FOR CALIFORNIA.—The steamship [illegible], Bolles, commander, sailed for San [illegible] at 6 o'clock P. M. yesterday. The [illegible] list of her passengers: J S Vandu[illegible], Rev H C Benson, Rev J D Driver, [illegible] and wife, Capt Josiah Myrick, R G [illegible], Geo L Stone, J Copeland, Alexander C [illegible], H H Martin, A Summer, L Honigs[illegible], Thos Pollock, Charles A Taylor, George F [illegible], Wm J McDonnell, C S Silver, Thomas [illegible], Mrs C Douglass, Mrs Northrop, Miss [illegible] Smith, C M Lockwood, M Hillman, Mrs [illegible], Miss Pollock, Dr D Clark, P M Shreuter, [illegible] and two children, Mrs Harris and sister, [illegible], John Hazelton, John H Parker, H [illegible], P Thompson, Joseph Freeman, and [illegible] in the steerage.

[illegible] TEMPLARS CONVENTION.—There will be a [illegible] Convention of Good Templars of the [illegible] of Multnomah, at East Portland, on [illegible], September 12th, at 10 o'clock A. M. [illegible] Deputy, Mr. C. G. Devine, has issued a circular calling upon the several lodges of [illegible] to furnish each an essay upon the following [illegible]: Music, how obtained, and its [illegible]. The Lodge room, its fixtures, arrangement and adornment. The Financial Secretary, his duties and what he can best do for the [illegible] of his Lodge. The Lodge Deputy, his [illegible]. Temperance Press, its management and [illegible]. Revival, how obtained and its advantages. Order and discipline. Secrecy. District Conventions.

[illegible] WILLAMETTE UNIVERSITY.—This institution [illegible] will open its fall term on Monday, [illegible] inst., under the Presidency of Prof. T. [illegible]. Mr. Gatch, with his family, leaves [illegible] for Salem to prepare for re-entering [illegible] position in the University. Formerly [illegible] school was under his charge it attained [illegible] prosperity never since exceeded, if we take [illegible] the then paucity of our school going [illegible]. We predict for the University for [illegible] coming year a period of prosperity beyond [illegible] any former year in its history.

RAILROAD TRAINS.—The O. & C. Railroad, on [illegible] Monday next, will run two trains a day [illegible] between East Portland and Waconda, [illegible] at the latter place with the Oregon [illegible] California stages. Trains will start from [illegible] Portland at 7 A. M. and 1 P. M., arriving [illegible] Waconda at 10 A. M. and 3 P. M. They will [illegible] Waconda at 10:30 A. M. and 4 P. M., ar[illegible] at East Portland at 1.30 and 7 P. M. [illegible] is twelve miles this side of Salem, or [illegible] one hour's stage travel. The time between Portland and Salem will be from three to [illegible].

[illegible] LIVE YANKEE.—This vessel discharged [illegible] locomotive and other railroad material at East [illegible], yesterday, and hauled over to Aber[illegible] on this side to discharge her cargo [illegible].

[illegible] CARRIAGES, ETC.—E. Martin & Co. [illegible] by the bark Whistler a fine lot of eastern [illegible] spring wagons, etc. [illegible] advantageous bargains.

THE BENEFIT TO THE APOLLO BAND.—The benefit to this band, of which we made mention yesterday morning, will take place next Saturday evening. The bill will be the comedy of "His Last Legs," a musical olio and the farce of the "Widow's Victim." Messrs. Bates, Vinson, Melville and Clinton, and the Misses Pixley and Ingles have volunteered. Among other attractions of the entertainment will be some imitations of distinguished actors, by Mr. Vinson. He will give imitations of Kean, Forrest, Buchanan, Stark, Wheatleigh, Bates, and, lastly, of Vinson himself.

A WOMAN BEATEN OVER THE HEAD.—Last evening a woman named Connolly, living on Third street near Taylor, was beaten over the head with a stick of wood, by her husband James Connolly. Persons who went to her assistance as she ran out of the house screaming, and fell upon the sidewalk, describe her injuries as serious. Her head was fearfully cut, and the wounds bled profusely. Connolly escaped and ran for the woods.

IMPORTANT LAND SUIT.—George H. Flanders, administrator of the estate of John H. Couch, deceased, commenced suit on Wednesday against S. G. Reed, to recover certain tracts of land at North Portland, donated by John H. Couch to the Oregon Central Railroad Company, on condition that the company should construct their railroad and locate their depot on the said lands. Reed holds by deed from the railroad company.

PERSONAL.—Among the passengers by the steamer which sailed last evening, we notice the names of several distinguished persons—General Crook, Rev. Dr. Benson, Rev. Mr. Driver, and others, beside quite a number of our leading merchants.

CIRCUS.—The attendance at the circus last evening was rather small, but the performance was none the less excellent. There will be another performance to-night.

THE NEXT STEAMER.—The dispatches state that the steamer Oriflamme will sail from San Francisco for Portland to day.

The Humboldt Branch.

The Jacksonville News gives the following information regarding the organization of the Branch Railroad Company for Southern Oregon:

Articles of incorporation of a company to build the Humboldt Branch Railroad through Rogue river and Umpqua valleys, in accordance with the Williams amendment, were filed, or are to be filed with the Clerk of Jackson county the present week. We have examined the articles of incorporation and find thereunto appended the names of many of our most substantial, monoyed citizens. The entire capital stock is put down at $5,000,000, or fifty thousand shares at $100 each. The headquarters of the company will be Jacksonville, Oregon. This movement effectually puts a quietus upon Congressman Smith's argument that no company would undertake to build the road through these valleys. The following of the names of some of the incorporators: James T. Glenn, J. B. Wrisley, Jacob Ish, James D. Fay, Sachs Bros., John Bilger, W. H. S. Hyde, R. Benedict, J. D. Coughlin, P. P. Prim, H. Klippel, William Hoffman, Andy Davidson, Wm. Turner, P. Britt, C. C. Reckman, John Neuber, Jesse Applegate, Jacob Thompson, N. C. Dean, Thomas Chavner and K. Kubli.

A temperance advocate in the West was recently found to be short in his accounts. A friend avenged the Society, kicking the erring brother from the meeting room. The erring brother smarted so much under the affliction that he became low spirited, and got drunk for the first time in fifteen years.

Three ruffians entered a house at Cohoes, N. Y., the other night, on the pretense of taking shelter from the storm. Although kindly treated by the wife of the owner, they showed their ingratitude by carrying off $400 in greenbacks.

A son of James G. Bieny, who was the first Presidential candidate of the old Liberal party, is a candidate for Congress in one of the Michigan districts.

A New Hampshire editor complains of the "dry time" he is having of it. His credit must be at a low ebb.

THE great railroad era has [illegible] upon this State. The locomotive whistle is already heard in our midst. The North Pacific railroad have a regiment of engineers and surveyors in the field, and will soon have thousands of men constructing the road. Hundreds of new settlers are arriving every month to fill up our State and develop her resources. But it matters not how many come, KOHN & FISHER will be ready for them with all kinds of Clothing and Staple goods. They are constantly receiving fresh supplies by every steamer, so their stock cannot be exhausted. Call and see them at their old stand on Front street.

SPIRITUAL GROVE MEETING.—At Butteville, on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 9th, 10th and 11th. Good speakers have been secured for the occasion. The P. T. boats will carry passengers to and fro for half price. They will also dispatch an extra boat on Sunday for the benefit of those wishing to go on that day.

The Life Sustaining Principle

The vital and the muscular systems are entirely distinct from each other. A man may have the frame of a Hercules, but if he is deficient in the vital energy he will not wear as well, or last as long or be as healthy and happy while he does last, as the man of ordinary or even slender build, who possesses a larger share of this animating principle. One of the greatest recommendations of that pure vegetable invigorant, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, is that it increases the vital force of the system. No medicine can double the volume of a man's muscle, or thicken and vulcanize his thews and sinews; but Hostetter's Bitters has an effect much more important. Its use promotes constitutional vigor. It re-inforces the life power, of which bone and sinew and muscle are merely the instruments, holding the same relation to it that machinery does to steam. Let the slight and apparently fragile take heart, they may have more stamina though far less physical strength, than the broad shouldered athletes they regard with envy. To restore, to sustain, to increase this stamina principle which, when in full supply, is the source of health and the best guarantee of longevity, is a special property of the famous restorative. It is not only a specific for dyspepsia, biliousness, intermittent fevers, constipation, &c. and a preventive of all diseases of a malarious character, but the best of all medicines for strengthening the constitution and awakening the powers of nature from whatever cause they may have become lethargic.

PAINFUL REFLECTION.

The Philanthropist's heart is painfully grieved to witness apathy on the part of those whose condition he seeks to ameliorate. Ignorance alone can relieve the subject to be benefitted from the charge of ingratitude. How then can those hope to escape this imputation that fail to acknowledge the superior merit of NEWELL'S PULMONARY SYRUP as the most effective remedy ever offered to an appreciative public for the certain and speedy cure of all affections of the lungs, of whatever nature

ASCENT OF MOUNT RAINIER

[illegible] Stevens [illegible] Van Trump [illegible] Mr Edward [illegible] Olympia [illegible] the [illegible] of Mr [illegible] old Packwood trail up the Nisqually river for one hundred [illegible] small [illegible] the Cowlitz and about twenty miles [illegible] south by west [illegible] est point to which the trail [illegible] thus [illegible] and difficult one taking [illegible] toil and climbing among fallen [illegible] brush [illegible] quite illegible [illegible] foot with pack animals [illegible]

After securing an Indian guide [illegible] Mr [illegible] left the party at Bear Prairie with one pack horse [illegible] home with the others. [illegible] ough knowledge of the country [illegible] enabled them [illegible] the party are under great [illegible] kindness in guiding them [illegible] each about fifty pounds [illegible] blanket the party started from Bear Prairie and crossed the intervening mountains [illegible] base of Rainier. Mr Coleman [illegible] unable to keep up with the party [illegible] after the start returned to Bear Prairie and remained there until their return. The trip across the mountains was one of [illegible] toil, occupying fourteen hours. The Indian guide following a general [illegible] the waters of the Cowlitz and Nisqually but was obliged to climb up and down peaks seven thousand feet in height, across lofty ridge after ridge until at length descending an almost perpendicular steep for two thousand feet they reached the southern tributary of the Nisqually, a beautiful clear stream, and the only one whose waters are not of a milky white hue. They were now at the base of Rainier, which with its [illegible] spurs or ridges occupied the whole country to the north for an area of 20 to 30 miles across. The upper half of the mountain is exceedingly steep, almost perpendicular, but the lower half is composed of long, gradual, gently-sloping ridges radiating from the mountain, with deep valleys between them. The upper part of the mountain itself and of those ridges is a solid continuous field of snow and ice five miles wide, except where it is broken by rocky ridges. The lower slopes, six to seven miles wide, are beautiful open meads covered with the brightest green grass, the most brilliant flowers, and dotted with groves of balsam fir. [illegible] snow occupy the depressions and shady places and make a beautiful contrast.

They moved up the southernmost of these ridges, established a camp on the verge of the perpetual snow line, at the last clump of firs, spent a day in carefully examining and fixing upon the line of ascent, and on Wednesday, the 17th, started up at 6 A. M., with ice poles, an ice axe, 100 feet of rope, long spikes in their boots, a large canteen of water, a lunch, flags, and a brass plate inscribed with their names. They took no coats, blankets or provisions. The first five miles were over snow fields, very regularly and gradually inclined at an angle of about 15°, and was made in three hours. They then climbed up a steep ridge of rocks for 500 yards along the side of a 1,000 foot precipice, for 200 yards in mid air upon a narrow ledge filled up with loose debris, then for 200 feet they ascended almost perpendicularly by the gutter formed by the junction of the rocky precipice and the ice fields projecting from the crown of the mountain, cutting steps in the ice and clinging to each projecting point of rock. The next 150 feet was made wholly upon the steep ice fields, by cutting steps, and the remainder of the ascent was made without material difficulty over perhaps one and a half miles of snow, on ice fields, across several crevasses, one of which they surmounted by throwing the rope around an overhanging pinnacle of ice and climbing up to the higher side of the crack, some twelve feet, by that means.

The party first ascended the southern or southwestern peak. This is a long, exceedingly steep, narrow ridge, stringing out from the main dome or crown for about a mile. The ridge did not afford over ten or twelve feet of foothold on the top, and the sides seemed to fall off almost perpendicularly. It was covered with ice, very much broken in thin sheets or pinnacles standing on edge very close together. The wind had been blowing hard all day, and had risen to such fury by this time that the tourists were obliged to brace themselves against it to prevent being blown off the sharp ridge and to throw themselves behind the pinnacles of ice for protection every fifty yards or so. Hastening forward in this way, they reached at length the highest point and with three cheers waved their flags aloft, and named the point "Peak Success" in token of their victory. They were just ten and one half hours in making the ascent, during all which time they toiled hard, and were not obliged to return a single step.

They stood a moment upon that narrow summit, bracing themselves against the furious and biting blast to view the prospect, but the whole country was covered with a dense sea of smoke, hiding everything except one solitary peak to the southeast (Mount Adams), whose summit like Rainier's rose above the smoke. Immediately about the mountain, on every side, were deep gorges falling off precipitously thousands of feet, separated by vertical ridges of rock, at [illegible] forming the bed of a glacier which can be seen far below, wrinkled across with countless crevasses. The great field of ice and snow which covers the crown of the mountain overhangs these gorges, and was continually breaking off in immense masses, which fell with the roar of thunder. The wind was now a perfect tempest and very cold; smoke and mist were flying about the base of the mountain, half hiding half revealing its gigantic outlines; and the whole scene was grand, sublime, awful.

Retracing their steps along the narrow summit of "Peak Success," the tourists crossed the ice-field and ascended the middle peak, about a mile distant. This is about two hundred feet the highest, and the ascent is up an easy sloping snow field to the summit, which is crowned by a rocky ridge. Climbing over this, they found themselves within a circular crater two hundred yards in diameter, filled with a solid bed of snow and with a rim of rocks projecting above the snow all around. As they crossed the crater on the snow Mr Van Trump detected the odor of sulphur, and the next instant numerous jets of steam, hot air, and thin smoke were observed issuing from the crevices of the rocks forming the rim on the northern side. Never was a discovery more welcome. Hastening forward they both exclaimed, as they warmed their thoroughly chilled and benumbed extremities over one of old Pluto's fires, that here they would pass the night secure against freezing to death, at least, for it was now six o'clock and it would have been impossible to descend the mountain before nightfall.

A deep cavern extending under [illegible] the ice formed by the action of the heat, was found, and a short distance within [illegible] they built a wall of stones [illegible] five by six feet around a strong jet of heat and steam. Ensconced within this shelter they discussed their future prospects while they warmed themselves at their natural register. The heat at the orifice was too great [illegible] for more than an instant, but the steam wet them, the smell of sulphur [illegible] and, in short, they passed a most miserable night, freezing on one side and in a hot sulphur steam bath on the other. The wind outside roared and whistled [illegible] within their cavern and their wall it did not much affect them except when an occasional gust came down perpendicularly.

The dawn at length [illegible] and grey, and the tempest [illegible] still wilder. As it grew light dense clouds of snow, driven mist went sweeping by [illegible] and completely hid the sun and enveloped the mountain so as to hide objects [illegible] distant. They watched [illegible] with great anxiety, fearing a storm which might detain them for days without food or shelter [illegible] yet, snow which would [illegible] the descent more perilous, or most likely impossible. And when at half past [illegible] rift in the driving mist gave a glimpse of blue sky they made haste to descend. First, however, they deposited the brass plate inscribed with their names, [illegible] name with the point of a knife, in a cleft in a large boulder on the highest summit, which was a huge mound of rocks on the east side of this crater of refuge, placed the canteen [illegible] and covered it with a large [illegible].

At half past [illegible] they left the [illegible] after [illegible] and [illegible] through the [illegible] and [illegible] deposit [illegible] the plate and canteen [illegible] discovered [illegible] higher than the first and [illegible] It is circular [illegible] with a bed of snow, with a rocky rim, and [illegible] sulphur [illegible] The [illegible] snow [illegible] thirty feet high [illegible] ridge [illegible] the brass plate [illegible] been the highest summit of the mountain. It was named "Crater Peak." The [illegible] named [illegible] Indian [illegible]

The route in returning was the same [illegible] until [illegible] reaching the foot of the rocky ridge, where the real difficulties of the [illegible] About five hours [illegible] and [illegible] seven and a half were occupied in ascending.

They now struck out joyfully and rapidly down the [illegible] for their camp. When nearly there Mr Van Trump slipped, slid down a steep [illegible] and fifty feet, and struck upon the rocks. His face and hands were badly skinned; he received several severe bruises and a deep and wide gash in the thigh. With much pain he managed to limp to camp. Once there our tired and famished mountaineers were soon regaling themselves [illegible] slapjacks and marmot, [illegible] which had been killed by the Indian.

The next day they [illegible] Mr Van Trump in camp [illegible] Stevens with the Indian [illegible] Thinking from the lay of the country that the mountain route by which the Indian had guided them was unnecessarily circuitous, and knowing that it was out of the question for Mr Van Trump [illegible] determined to seek a new and better route by following down the tributary of the Nisqually to the point where the party [illegible] the river for Bear Prairie. [illegible] against the urgent remonstrance of the Indian [illegible] found a route so much better that he reached Bear Prairie in [illegible] hours instead of [illegible] hours by the mountains.

Mr Coleman was found at their old camp [illegible] He said that, in attempting to climb up the face of a precipice in ascending the mountain up which the Indian guide led them when they started for Bear Prairie, he found it necessary to throw off his pack. It rolled to the very foot of the mountain and was lost, and as he could not make the ascent of Rainier without his Alpine paraphernalia contained therein he was obliged to return to camp. Having, however, found some [illegible] his remaining effects he had determined to make the ascent by himself, and with that view had spent the past five days in surveying a route and in establishing a cache or stock of provisions on the top of a mountain. The following day the Indian was sent with a horse for Mr Van Trump, who succeeded in coming [illegible] by the Nisqually river with but three miles of walking, and the others moved over from Bear Prairie to the Nisqually where the party was once more reunited. They remained here three days during the rain storm of the 20th, 21st and 22d and then returned to Olympia in four days by the same trail by which they advanced.

The journey back was without special incident and they reached the settlements last Friday after a march of 240 miles in seventeen days, somewhat tired, thoroughly hungry and quite willing to submit to a bath (not a sulphur one, this time) and clean suits.

FARRAGUT

His Antecedents and Boyhood—Anecdotes of the Great Admiral—His Last Illness.

[From the New York Times.]

Farragut began service when a mere boy and before he was a dozen years old he had distinguished himself by his bravery and won the warm admiration of old naval heroes. He came of sterling stock. His grandfather was from Ciudadella, in the Island of Minorca, whence he emigrated to Florida in the seventeenth century. His father was a soldier of the Revolution, and a brave one, and his mother was one of the most courageous women of her day. At the time of his birth his father was serving as Major in a cavalry regiment of the regular army against the Indians. Farragut was born in a rough pioneer house, not much superior to a log hut, in the wildest portion of East Tennessee, at a place twelve miles from Knoxville, known as Campbell's Stations, of which his parents were among the first settlers, and his early years were passed in the midst of the most thrilling scenes of border life. He used to say that he remembered vividly encounters his mother had with the Indians during their pioneer life when he was but a child, and one in particular which occurred when he could not have been more than five years of age, in which she fought a band of savages almost single handed from her barricaded hut, and would have lost her life but for the opportune arrival of his father's squadron of horse, who turning the scales, scattered the invaders and almost annihilated them.

ON THE ESSEX

Just prior to the breaking out of the war of 1812 his father was called to the command of a gunboat at New Orleans, and thither he removed with his family. Young David, then about eight years of age, began to thirst for glory, and begged to be allowed to go on a war ship. His prayer was finally granted, and a berth secured for him on the world famed Essex, under the famous Commodore David D. Porter, who was a personal friend of the elder Farragut and great admirer of the boy, in whom he thought he saw the making of a brave and capable naval officer. Farragut's first combat was with Porter in the brief but brilliant engagement with the English sloop of war Alert on the 13th of April, 1812, when he was about but 11 years old, and his second the heroic conflict in Valparaiso harbor between the Essex and the two British sloops Phoebe and Cherub, where finally the Essex struck her colors only to save the few remaining precious lives that had not been sacrificed to the fury of the forces under the British captain Hallyer with double their number of men. In this fight the particulars of which are, or ought to be, familiar to every school boy, Farragut was by Porter's side, aiding in every possible way the brave commander, and was conspicuous among the most heroic of the plucky band. He was selected for [illegible] service and invariably performed his work quickly and well, exhibiting no fear but, on the contrary, a desire to be ever in the hottest of the fight. When at last it was determined to surrender the brave little boy and the American colors were hauled down, the boy sobbed as if his heart were breaking, only then fully comprehending the extent of the loss, and that the Yankees were completely beaten. Midshipman Farragut was slightly wounded in this engagement, and with others [illegible] was sent home [illegible] while Admiral Porter in his official report took occasion to pay a high compliment [illegible] his rare bravery and regretted that the tender youth of the boy would [illegible] the promotion he had so richly earned.

INSTANCES OF HIS BRAVERY

Many instances are related of the boy's remarkable bravery, capability and readiness to undertake whatever was [illegible] However difficult or dangerous. When he was but thirteen years old a remarkable [illegible] to perform was intrusted to him. He was made master of the Barclay, one of the [illegible] vessels that had fallen a prize to the Essex, and was ordered to [illegible] Valparaiso [illegible] the Essex Jr. [illegible] the orders of a man [illegible] touched at [illegible] However [illegible] the boy master ordered the men to fill away the topsail, and when he got up with the Essex Jr. reported Randall's conduct. The latter excused himself by saying that he only intended to frighten the boy [illegible] but they [illegible] the boy [illegible] the savage [illegible] Randall [illegible]

[illegible]

From his childhood Admiral Farragut had [illegible] remarkably well [illegible] very [illegible] that others should [illegible] In [illegible] In [illegible] the Spanish [illegible] Arabic [illegible] during a residence of [illegible] months in Tunis. In connection with his Arabic the following anecdote is related [illegible] Captain [illegible] cannot [illegible] with those people [illegible] that he must know what he was accused of was true. He looked out [illegible] and seeing an old Arab woman immediately commenced conversing and [illegible] gathered [illegible] that it was Arabic he was speaking and [illegible] for some time [illegible] gift.

[illegible]

As is well known the Admiral had [illegible] but his spirit and disposition had been [illegible] his friends [illegible] that [illegible] indomitable will would prove an effectual foundation for future years of health and usefulness. When the warm weather commenced his characteristic [illegible] to be superseded by a growing weakness, the main [illegible] of which was [illegible] of the heart. Thinking perhaps the invigorating [illegible] of mountain and sea air combined would prove a panacea for his ills, he went to Portsmouth, N. H., on the [illegible] of July last, the sixty-ninth and last anniversary of his birth. He was brought in the United States steamer Tallapoosa, and was accompanied by Surgeon McMasters, who was with him during his cruise on board the old frigate Franklin, and who was specially detailed by the Navy Department to attend him. During his [illegible] The Admiral was very low upon his arrival, and was at once conveyed to the residence of Commandant [illegible] where his last days [illegible] rendered [illegible] within the power of human aid [illegible] He continued to grow feebler immediately upon his arrival, and his disease seemed to be as surely as it was slowly destroying his every vitality. He had not been able to [illegible] weeks and only upon one or two occasions had he ventured [illegible] of a short carriage ride. It was however not until Tuesday last that his really threatening [illegible] Early that day he was suddenly stricken with paralysis and he never spoke again, and the only muscles which he seemed to have control over were those of the face. Several times it was thought he was dying, and on [illegible] it was [illegible] the spark of life had fled. Telegrams announcing the [illegible] were written but [illegible] the departure of the messenger to the telegraph office signs of life returned and remained until noon to-day, when the spirit of the gallant old sailor was borne gently away. There were present at the time of his death Lieut. Loyal Farragut, son of the deceased, also, Dr. Granger, his father-in-law, Surgeons McMasters and Meatcalf, and Commandant [illegible] and several members of his family.

THE RIVERSIDE

HOMESTEAD ASSOCIATION!

EAST PORTLAND, OREGON

[illegible] ONE HUNDRED SHARES [illegible] books were opened [illegible]

The following [illegible] from the Oregonian [illegible] will convey a [illegible] of the plan [illegible] Association [illegible]

RIVERSIDE HOMESTEAD ASSOCIATION.

This association, of which organization we gave [illegible] a few days since, is now ready [illegible] of shares. As it is, with one exception, the Portland Homestead Association, the pioneer organization of that kind in this city, it may be well enough to state what are its purposes and the manner in which it proposes to [illegible] The purposes of these Homestead Associations are not at all speculative in the ordinary sense of the word. They are dependent for their profits on their investment upon the natural advance in the value of their lands consequent upon the co-operation of many individuals [illegible] and the advance in values of all surrounding lands by reason of the expansion of population and demand for homes outside of but still near the city. The Riverside Homestead Association has a fraction over one hundred and twenty acres of land situated just south of [illegible] on the east side of the river, the nearest boundary line being about one mile from the ferry landing at East Portland. The tract lies in one strip along the Willamette river, half a mile in length, and another strip along the Oregon and California railroad, half a mile in length, the two strips being connected near the middle by two rows of blocks with a street between them, the whole forming a figure not unlike the letter H. It is divided into 71 blocks, 200 feet square (with streets running at right angles) and [illegible] fractional lots along the river front. The shares number 600, worth $60 per share. It will be seen that a share thus represents nearly a lot with an undivided interest in the 80 fractional lots. The fractional shares are to be sold off at the proper time for the benefit of the Association, shareholders coming in for the proceeds in proportion to the number of shares held. When all shares are taken and the Association shall determine to do it, the choice of lots and blocks will be put up at auction to the highest bidder, the proceeds of such sales after deducting the original price of shares, [illegible] to be divided equally among the whole number of shares. Thus if a person wants a particular lot or block and is willing to pay $100 or $200 premium, more or less as the case may be, he pays it and takes the lot or block as his individual property, the premium being divided among the whole number of shareholders. It will be seen therefore, that everything is co-operative and all interests mutual. No man can make a dollar out of it without also making a dollar for every other equal shareholder. There is no chance for loss, unless the property by some chance should depreciate far below the first actual cost. Whether this is liable to happen in the case of this particular tract of land must be judged by each for himself, but considering the steady and unprecedented advance on real estate in this city and neighborhood and at East Portland and vicinity for the last year or two, it seems hardly possible for values to go back.

In the Riverside Association all proper precautions seem to have been taken to guard against monopolies of shares. No person is allowed to buy more than the number of shares representing three blocks, or twenty-four lots, and votes determining the operations of the Association are restricted in the same manner. The buyers of shares may pay down $60 per share, which will exempt them from all assessments, or they may pay $15 quarterly with an assessment of $3 per share payable with the first instalment, being liable in this latter case to another (and only one other) assessment of $3 per share. Upon the payment of the shares in full with the assessments as above the holder is entitled to his certificate and his proportion of all the profits accrued from all sources. No officer of the Association receives any pay for services except the Secretary, who gets $25 per month, so it will be seen that the expenses must be light.

That part of the tract lying along the river is a high plateau, nearly level, about 60 to 90 feet above the water. There is no part of the front row of blocks but commands a splendid view of Portland and the river for miles up and down stream. That part of the tract lying along the railroad is, every foot of it, of the richest loam soil and adapted to gardening purposes. A beautiful little stream of pure water runs through almost the entire length of this wing of the tract, affording the means of irrigation and power sufficient to supply pure water to every part of the whole tract. There is not a waste lot or fractional lot in the entire tract. Under all these advantages it would seem impossible that there should be any chance of loss to shareholders. Within a year each shareholder, if he chooses, may get a perfect title to as many lots as his shares may represent, or he may continue his interest undivided with the Association while the organization may exist.

THE RIVERSIDE HOMESTEAD ASSOCIATION.

We have been led to make these remarks from the fact [illegible] skirts of this city and East Portland [illegible] all classes [illegible] Riverside [illegible] of East Portland [illegible] established. The site [illegible] of the ferry landing [illegible] [illegible]

Horrible Diseases.
How many thousands of persons, both male and female, are there who are suffering [illegible] from the effects of secret indulgences, or from the [illegible] absorbed into the system. Look at their pallid countenances and disfigured faces and their broken constitutions, disqualifying them for the happiness of marriage or the enjoyment of life. In this horrible [illegible] thousands suffer until death closes the scene. Let parents, guardians, friends attend to those who are suffering from any of these horrible life-destroying maladies. Let them be cured and cured before it is too late. Send them immediately to Doctor Gibbon, a physician who has made private disease his especial study, [illegible] to cure the most inveterate [illegible] mercury or any injurious drugs. It is important to the welfare of those who are afflicted, or to those who are interested in the welfare of their friends, to be careful of the many pretended doctors who infest all cities, publishing [illegible] of curing all diseases in a few days [illegible] public by using the names of eminent physicians of European and other places. Be therefore careful, [illegible] strict inquiry, or you may fall into the hands of these charlatans.

Seminal Weakness.
Seminal Emissions the consequence of [illegible] solitary vice or depraved sexual indulgence, [illegible] by the youth of both sexes to an alarming [illegible] producing with unerring certainty the [illegible] of morbid symptoms unless combatted by [illegible] local measures, viz. Those not blessed should apply immediately [illegible] or by letter and have a cure effected by his new scientific mode of treating this disease, which is a sure, speedy, affecting a quick and radical cure. Dr. G will give Hundred Dollars to any person who will [illegible] to him that he was cured [illegible] of the San Francisco quacks.

[illegible]

Caution to the Unfortunate.
Beware of the San Francisco quacks and [illegible] who, with bogus sworn-to certificates [illegible] Some of the self styled doctors, whose [illegible] found in the daily and weekly [illegible] cisco and other places, are [illegible] lazy to work at their trades.
